Detail Level:

In the detail level, you can list the most minor and most essential elements that is needed to construct the end user deliverable. Think of it as the building blocks and the DNA of your Saas products.

Core Level:

This is the level where you start thinking of where these details need to live. Most likely, it will be the deliverable or the results of using this Saas tool.

High Level:

At the high level, you think of the needs besides the main produced results. For example, do you need collaboration tools, share what you create with others, need a concept of projects or folders, and give users the ability to comment and view editing history.
